From the desk of the pastor...

This weekend we celebrate the feast of Christ the King. When Jesus was crucified, a wooden sign was nailed over his head with the inscription INRI, which is “Jesus Nazarenus Rex Iudaeorum” in Latin, in English, “Jesus of Nazareth, King of the Jews” in English.

Is Christ really a king? Standing before Pilate, Christ did not deny that he was indeed a king. But then he said, “My kingdom does not belong to this world” (Jn 18,36). Jesus’ reply means he was not the kind of king Pilate imagined – a military, political ruler, but rather a spiritual ruler.

The gospel presents to us a king who will judge us. He will decide on that final day who will or will not share his kingdom forever. It’s a dreadful scene but for those who are faithful to Jesus’ teachings, it will be a day of glory.

If you read carefully the parable of the Last Judgement (Mt. 25, 31-46), you will notice that our judgement will not depend on whether you’re a genius, a Miss Universe, the wealthiest man, nor even our long prayers. Obviously, these are important but the Lord is saying that these should be put at the service of the “least, last and lost” of society. Hence, the question that will be asked is: How much have you done or not done for them?

The late Mother Teresa now saint was deeply moved by Jesus’ Parable of the Last Judgment that she left her work in a school to devote her whole life among the poorest of the poor, thus earning the title “the Saint of the Gutters.” She said, “I want to go to Heaven that’s why I follow Jesus’ teachings of caring and devoting my life to the poor.”

There are Catholics who believe, sincerely or otherwise, that as long as they go to church on Sunday, receive communion, and avoid evil, they are good Christians. But as St. James the apostle puts it: “Faith without work is dead.”

A man says: “What scares me most is when God says to Mother Teresa on Judgement Day, Teresa, you should have done more good work.”

“And there I am—right behind her!”
